Faith Bjalobok holds a masters degree in Criminology from IUP, BA from Chatham University and a masters degree and Ph.D. in philosophy from Duquesne University as well as a Fellow at the Oxford Center for Animal Ethics. She is the Founder of Fluffyjean Fund for Felines and speaks on title 18 section 5511 HB 1238 identifying and reporting abuse. Faith teaches the Philosophy of Animals service learning course at Duquesne University and manages a private rescue farm in Washington County where horses, donkeys, pigs, roosters, ducks, cats and other animals come to live out their natural lives.

Mary Withrow Kennedy has spent the past 15 years helping animals in various aspects of the animal welfare world. She has been instrumental in creating and passing animals legislation statewide as well as writing and testifying for the City of Pittsburgh Anti-tethering and Outside Dogs ordinance, the "Animals in Cars" ordinance and the "Wild Bird Trapping Ban" ordinance. For the past 10 years has been heavily involved with Animal Friends, teaching training classes, the Western Pennsylvania Humane Society as their Director of Shelter, Behavior, Humane Investigations and Govt Affairs and Advocacy. Mary is a volunteer for the Human Society of the United States Animal Cruelty and Response Team. In 2012 the HSUS awarded Mary for her rehabilitation of victims of dogfighting and having rehabilitated over 50 dogs for the HSUS from dogfighting. She is a dog trainer, fixture in the rescue community and her love and passion for animals is known all throughout the city and across the country. A native Pittsburgher, Mary grew up in Point Breeze, is the proud mother of Michael and Allie and now resides in Regent Square.
Dr. Cassandra Kuba is an associate professor of Anthropology at California University of Pennsylvania, where she is eager to provide hands on educational experiences for her students and to assist community groups and agencies in achieving their goals, whether it be helping to enrich learning in the classroom, exploring bioarchaeology and local history or providing forensic anthropology services. Dr. Kuba’s research interests reside strongly in the analysis of human skeletal remains from archaeological and forensic settings. She has analyzed material from Ancient Nubia, 18th/19th century London, and sites across the US. She has assisted in death investigations in Pennsylvania and Indiana and regularly provides expert advise for writers of books and television shows, such as Bones. Dr. Kuba holds a B.Sc. in Anthropology (forensic anthropology focus) from Mercyhurst University; a M.Sc. in Human Biology from the University of Indianapolis (skeletal biology focus); and a Ph.D. in Anthropology (biological anthropology-bioarchaeology focus) from Arizona State University. She has received the Presidents’s Distinguished Merit Awards for her teaching and service work from California University of Pennsylvania and the Distinguished Alumni Award for Contributions to Chosen Field from Mercyhurst University.